Keto Hash browns- Emily Petty

1 egg

1 cup cauliflower rice (The commissary seems to only sell frozen riced cauliflower and broccoli combo, it works fine)

Salt and Pepper

Sriracha (optional)

Simply mix the egg with the riced veggies in a cup or bowl and season with salt and pepper. Heat oil in a frying pan and spread the mixture so it's kind of shaped like hash brown patties. Fry a few minutes on each side. Makes 2.

SPOTLIGHT — Doris Jung

Me in Seattle in the summer of 2019 visiting my daughter, Kat.

I was born in Brigham City, Utah on August 23rd, 1960 along with my twin sister, Diane. Our parents had immigrated to the USA in 1958 from Germany. They moved to Ogden when we were a year old. When we were 2 years old, my parents joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. In 1970 our family moved to Germany even though my parents were US citizens by then. They were homesick, but only wished to stay for two years. We ended up staying 5 years. My sister and I attended German school. We learned German and got to know our Grandparents, uncles and aunts, and cousins. We also started working on our family history. Back in the USA, I graduated from Weber State University and got a degree as a Clinical Laboratory Scientist. I worked in various medical laboratories for almost 20 years. I also got married, had three children (Paul, Lisa, and Stephen). I got divorced at age 30. I lived in Sandy, Utah for 7 years, then moved in with my parents and got a master's degree in Speech Language Pathology. I worked for the Ogden School District for 10 years. I decided to take a job with the Department of Defense Educational Activity. My children were grown by then and my goal was to work in Germany. I never made it there. I worked in Kentucky, England, and now in Japan. That was almost 10 years ago. My oldest child is transgender and is now called Kat and lives in Seattle, Washington. The other two live in Ogden with my parents. My youngest and I bought their house, so they can stay there in their old age. My son and daughter help my parents. We are in the process of adding a second floor on the house for a retirement apartment for me when I retire in few years.
